WIDOW WELCH'S PILLS.

(KEARSLEY'S ORIGINAL.)

So justly colobrated for their pseudiar virtues, are recommended to the notice of every ledy (having obtained the searction of most gentlemen of the medical profession) as asic and valuable mediciane in effectually removing obstructions, and relieving other incoveniences to which the female frame is liable, supecially those which at an early period of life arise from want of exercise and general dobility of the system; they create an appetite, correct indigestion, remove griddiness and nervous headache, and are sminently useful in windy disorders, shortness of breath and suplication of the heart; being perfectly immoest they may be used with asfety in all seasons and climates. Price is 64 per bex, of all chemists.

It is necessary, owing to numerous imitations, to wars the public that KEARSLEY's is the only original receipt, and has been prépared by the Kearsley family over eightly years. Purchasers should see that each box is wrapped in willte paper, and the neme, "C. KEARSLEY" is engraved on the Government stamp.

A DEFEATED chess-player may be sometimes heard murmuring, "Ah! if I had only castled before that move of his queen's knight, I should have avoided that attack and won the game." Similarly in the business of life, persons who have failed are often heard to explain how, if they had to manage their matters ever again, they would succeed instead of failing These remorseful reviews of the inevitable past are often illusive, failure being more often due to a general concurrence of causes than to any only used a particular argument, which it unluckily fergot to use, the issue of the debate might have been different. This argument was first brought forward by Mr. WALTER COOPER in a letter to the Herold, but Walter Cooper in a letter to the Herald, but it has been further elaborated by "Speculum." The point taken is this—that the Assembly was precluded from complaining of the production of the Governor's minute, because it had itself virtually asked for it by asking for the production of all "minutes of his Excellency's advisers, giving the reasons, if any, for such exile or liberation."

"Speculum" has been replied to by "Spectator," who has looked into the mirror with a view to see what is to be seen there on reflection. Those of our readers, therefore, who are interested in the constitutional part of the late discussion have now had an opportunity of discussion have now had an opportunity of seeing what is to be said for and against this seeing what is to be said for and against this last new argument, brought forward after it is too late to be of any practical service. If, however, instead of being an afterthought it had been introduced into the discussion, would it have materially altered the issue, and have estified the House on the point on which it showed itself so sensitive? It appears to us that it would not, and that it is without weight.

that it would not, and that it is without weight.

The motion of Mr. Combus asking for information was carried on the 8th of May, at which time the Gardiner minute had not been written, and was probably not thought of, nor had the petitions to which it was a reply been presented. The motion, therefore, could only refer to documents then in existence. It is true refer to documents then in existence. It is true that it sometimes happens that a return is presented in continuation of a preceding return. The Gardiner minute, however, was not of this character. It was not stated to be so at the time, nor at any time subsequently, and moreover it was headed "By command"—the established formula for intimating that it was laid on the table not in obedience to an order of the House, but by the volition of the Executive. Moreover, a return in continuation is a return of the same sort, and built, so to speak, on the same lines as that to which it is the sequel. Now, the return to Mr. Combes's original motion, which was produced in an abridged form in the Herold of May 26, contained no Governor's mutes. It was however in complete. m nutes. It was, however, in complete satisfaction of the demand of the House, for Mr. PARKES stated that "the Government had laid before Parliament, in print, every word sentence, every line, and every word that had taken place between the Ministers and the GOWENGE on this subject." He thereby indicated, as clearly as he could do, that his view of the object of the motion of May 8th was to bring out any advice already given, or reasons already urged by Ministers, so as to show to what extent they had made themselves responsible. Mr. Comms himself made no demur whatever to this return as not giving completely the information he asked for. On the contrary, he proceeded, partly on the basis of that information to submit his motion of disapproval of the release of Gardinura. Nor, indeed, could he with any justice have complained of the in-completeness of the return, seeing that it gave all the information he asked for. He had not asked for any minutes by the GOVERNOE, but simply the "minutes of his Excellency's advisors." We have therefore, in this matter, first the language of the motion itself, which is explicit, and which restricts the demand specifically to the minutes of his Excel-lency's advisers. Then, secondly, we have the statement of the PRIME MINISTER, assuring the House that it had got every line and every word of such Ministerial advice. Then, thirdly, we have the contentment of Mr. Comuss and the House generally with the return as pro-duced. Now how, after this, is it possible to could be held to ask for the production of a minute not then in existence, not then thought of, and not of the character asked for? How can a wish to know the nature and extent of Ministerial advice be construed into a wish to know the Governon's reasons for acting on his personal discretion in the exercise of the prerogative of pardon. The case is still further strengthened by a reference to the debate on Mr. Commes's motion of the 3rd of June censuring the release of GARDINER. In that debate Mr. PARKES, in reply to some wild remarks by Mr. Comers, demonstrated at some length the unconstitu-tionalness of demanding from the Crown its reasons for exercising the prerogative of mercy. He showed that British precedent and the opinions of the leading English statesmen were adverse to any such demand, and that it would be properly refused. The House voted with Mr. PARKES on that occasion, and rejected Mr. PARKES on that occasion, and rejected Mr. Conners's motion. It is quite impossible that after using that argument Mr. PARKES could without demur have produced a minute giving the Crown's reasons, and have done so under the pretence that he was thereby obeying an order of Parliament. The general principle had down by him that the GOVERNOR was not responsible to the House for the mode in which is exercised the Rayal precognities was not he exercised the Royal prerogative was not disputed, nor did the House ask for the pro-duction of the GOVERNOR'S reasons. But the PREMIER having first elaborately argued that these reasons ought not to be asked for, sub-sequently, without request, produced them, and now at the eleventh hour an effort is made to show that this production was in conformity with a request which was strictly limited to Ministerial documents, and which request had ill who calmly review the succession of events all who calmip review the succession of events that the argument now adduced will not hold water. The minute cannot in any way whatever be regarded as having been asked for by the House, or as having been produced by the Ministry in obedience to their demand. Like most afterthoughts the argument is not really worth much, nor do we imagine that if produced during the debate it would have affected its result.

A SYSTEM of Compulsory Education has recently been adopted in the State of New York. The that "every parent, guardian, or other person having control and charge of any child between the ages of eight and fourteen years, shall cause such child to attend some public or private day school at least fourteen weeks in each year, eight weeks at least of which attendance shall be consecutive or to be instructed requisity as be consecutive, or to be instructed regularly at home at least fourteen weeks in each year in spelling, reading, writing. English grammar, geography and arithmetic, unless the physical or mental condition of the child is such as to render such attendance or instruction inexpedient or impracticable." Those who peruse that Act will see that a certificate is required. e consecutive, or to be instructed regularly at dient or impracticable." Those who peruse the Act will see that a certificate is required prior to employment; that manufacturers employing children who do not possess a school certificate are liable to a penalty of fifty dollars, and that the penalties are to be added to the school fund of the district. It is further proone particular omission.

If we may judge from the letter which lately appeared in the Herald, signed "Speculum," the departed Ministry, or some of its friends, seem to think that if it had friends, seem to think that if it had provision of the sections requiring them to send their children to school shall be liable to send their children to school shall be liable to provision of the sections requiring them to send their children to school shall be liable to pay a fine of one dollar for the first offence, and a fine of five dollars for each and every week in which the offence is repeated to the number of weeks specified as the school period during of weeks specified as the school period during which instruction is made compulsory.

The framers of this law have not encumbered it with any psovisions about religious teaching, but have left this matter in the hands of the parents and of the various religious denominations. The principal object of the Legislature has been to prevent children from growing up like white savages, ignorant of the rudiments of education; unable to read the laws of the country; and consequently unable to perform the duties of citizenship. We do not read, however, of any organised body assailing the Government of New York because it attempts thus to elevate these children in the social scale, or asserting that orthography, geography, grammar, and figures because it attempts that to elevate these children in the social scale, or asserting that orthography, geography, grammar, and figures ought to be taught as though they were parts of a theological system. And above all there seems to be no large class of men paid to perform religious duties who denounce the system as Godless, and yet refrain from taking advantage of opportunities which are afforded them to impart that which they say is essential to the utility and completeness of all education. The Act is, however, regarded in the light of an experiment, and as the primary step towards something more nearly approaching to perfection. The State Superintendent, in his letter to the various school officers, urges them to do all they can to give the system a fair trial, and to report any defects which they may discover in the working of the law.

which they may discover in the working of the law.

It is probable that experience will show the necessity for improvements. Where the State does not exercise control over all persons engaged in the work of instruction, questions may arise as to the efficiency of teachers. Some may be as poorly qualified for the task as were indicated the teachers who had office under the Denominational system which formerly existed in this colony. The State of New York, by limiting the compulsory school age, and making the legal provision operative only between the ages of eight and fourteen, has steered clear of a difficulty which besets our neighbours in Victoria. The period specified is one in which many children begin to be helpful to their margnes but it is also spitial time. to their parents, but it is also a critical time for the acquirement of habits, the reception of instruction, and the formation of character. The passing of such a law implies an exist ing necessity for the State to step in between the thoughtlessness and negligence of natural guardians, and insist that children shall not be robbed of their birthright and shall not be robbed of their pirintight and allowed to grow up a danger to the State, which will in due time welcome them to the exercise of political rights and expect from them the performance of political and eocial duties. According to the regulations under the Public Schools Act of Victoria, teachers are compelled to receive children not under years of age, and it is said that the effect of this law has been to considerably increase the numbers on the school rolls. It is reported, numbers on the school rolls. It is reported, however, that the regulations have been abused, and one instance is mentioned of "a baby being regularly wheeled in a persumbalator to a State school, to receive its daily modicum of free, secular, and com-pulsory education." A State or a colony cannot pulsory education. A State or a corony cannot be interested in turning its Public schools into crecker, and the people of New York have acted wisely in limiting the time of compulsory education to the period specified in the Act which we have quoted.

our American cousins is styled by the Press
"An Act fer bad boys;" but this is an unfortunate heading. The Act is for good but infortunate heading. The Act is for good ones, unfortunate boys as well as for bad ones, There is a clause which relates to "habitual truants," and it is very much to be regretted that children of this class in Sydney cannot in like manner be made subject to periodical school training. Strong instances in favour of such a law may be seen in our principal streets after dark, or about the wharfs. Our city Arabs are sumerous, and much difficulty and expense will be incurred by allowing them to wander about uncared for, and to learn the language and acquire the habits of the vicious and profilests.

The Compulsory Education Act of New York came into operation on the first day of this year. According to our last advices, it had not been determined whether special schools should be provided for waifs and strays, or whether they should be instructed in schools attended by the children of poor but respect-able parents whose necessities compel them to acceparents whose necessities compet them to send their offspring to factories and other places to earn a livelihood. In regard to truants, also, it was a debatable point as to how they should be captured and treated. It was suggested that the duty of securing them should be delegated to "truant officers" and a "truant superintendent." To ensure a proper carrying out of the law, a census has been made of the city to ascertain the names and ages of the children in each house, and copies of this census for each ward will be supplied to the station-houses, the local school Boards, and the Department of Education. It is a question whether it will not be necessary to provide also a new class of schools. It is thought also a new class of schools. It is thought likely that in the first instance "habitual truants" will be sent to some reformatory, probably that for the reformation of juvenile delinquents.

The objection is naturally strong against placing dirty and ragged children in a well-ordered school, attended by the children of respectable parents. The New York Herold says that there is also "a good deal of dissatisfaction among the proprietors of deal of dissatisfaction among the proprietors of factories and shops, where they have in many instances lads of from ten to fourteen years of age attending machines, running of errands, building fires, doing the work of grown janitors, outleding nees, doing the work of grown jantices, or attending paper stands, or perhaps they are engaged in peddling small wares. The commotion among the newsboys and bootblacks, when they find the law working practically, will, no doubt, be a terrible one. The law counts two weeks attendance at an evening. school to be equal to one week's attendance at day school, and states that any employer who shall hire any child of either sex between the prescribed ages shall, upon conviction of the offence, be fined 50 dollars for each and every offence. This will make employers who hire lads of twelve or thereabouts, and who starve them on 3 dollars or 4 dollars a week, a little careful, after they have been fined five or six times probably, and the fines added to the public school moneys of the district in which the employer commits the offence."

The opinion of a lady teacher of great experience is quoted in the following words:—

"I have no faith whatever in the workings of the new law. It is but an experiment, and such an experiment will rever succeed in America. I am fully convinced. In Germany, with the magnificent bureau-ratic system, anything may be done, and there is hardly a limit to an educational provision. But here our people will place obstacles in the way of any such law; and I am afraid that the police justices will be kept in hot water half their time with writs of habeas corpus for the release of lads who have relations or families. I think that it will take a truant officer to every large or grammar school in the city. It is all well enough now for the resson that if a pupil does not attend with some aspect of regularity, then the pupil is expelled and dropped from the books of the school. And besides we have only enrolled those who came voluntarily, and, in fact, we have to turn many away at certain seasons of the year. But here are, it is probable, 25,000 or 30,000 children thrown upon our rather scanty rescurces at one aweeping blow, hundreds of these children being from districts intested with disease; and although you may force attendance you cannot enforce cleanliness or a proper regard for the decencies of life. And our children who come from decent homes and whose mothers are careful of them—what must become of them in such a case? Let the Board of Education first build achools for this reinforcement of street boys and girls before they place these waifs on our school roils, and then let the Prussian system be enforced, and not until them. I speak as a woman who has seen two generations of pupils pass before me as a teacher."

Whatever may be the result of this experiment, it is one which cannot fail to interest us. "I have no faith whatever in the workings of the new

SPECULUM AGAIN.

TO THE MDITOR OF THE HEALD.

Six.—There may be something more than appears on the face of it, in the letter signed "Speculum," in the Herald of Friday, Pebruary 26. Otherwise it is not casy to understand why Mr. Forster should be taken to task for opinions which had in effect been repeatedly expressed before, by others as well as by himself, during the several stages of the late political crisis. One fallacy at least in the somewhat elaborate reasonings of "Speculum" may not be obvious at once, but it is at any rate perceptible enough upon very slight examination. It consists in avoiding or ignoring the distinction between absolute or unqualized powers, such as exist in or are assumed by despotic sovereigns, and those merely moninal or qualified powers such as belong to, or are legally vested in, constitutional Sovereigns, Or, in other words, it consists injuscribing to her Majesty, or her Mejesty's Representative in this colony, arbitrary and exclusive personal powers, such as are not presensed, and could not be possessed, by her Majesty, as a constitutional Sovereign. "Speculum" has been probably misled, as others before him have been misled, by the use of the word "Presongative," of which we have heard so much lately, and which has been constantly thrust in our faces as a bugbear to frighten or "astonish the natives" by persons claiming to be statemen and great constitutional authorities, as well as exponents of liberal opinions. "Speculum" is a percent when the constitutional constitutional authorities, as well as exponents of liberal opinions. "Speculum"

But the same thing might be said of "the privileges of the local Pariament," and of "the rights of the people" in connection with, or in relation to, other powers of the Crown, such as the power of appointing to seas in the Legislative Coursell, to judicial and other high offices, the power of choosing, appointing, and dismissing Ministers, the power of granting charters, the power of proroguing, and especially of dissolving, Parliament. In these and other matters the power of the Crown is and has been long nominally absolute, but in practice every one knows it is quite the reverse. In point of fact the power of dissolution is the only special or exclusive power now left to the Soveragn, an exception obviously arising from the very seccestry of the case, and which therefore in a me measure proves the rule. In this colony the power of dissolution has been so frequently abused, as to show very plainly the danger of exclusive powers. But even this power is limited by public opinion. No Sovereign or Governor dare dissolve Parliament wantonly, or so frequently as practically to abolish Parliamentary action, and desiberation, or very soon after a Parliament has been elected. But with this exception the powers of the Sovereign are no more than nominally exclusive or absolute. The Queen dare, not, and does not in other cases, act without the advice of her Ministers. In fact, it is not the Queen, strictly speaking, but Ministers who powers for all friends positions, and the Gueen of the somewhat different position of the Gvernor, in some sepects, from that of the Queen. He is responsible not criy to Parliament bere possible to make a power of the somewhat different position of the Gvernor constitutional authorities of late have appeared to infer, arging in fact as if the Queen's delegate had higher powers than the Use of the proposibility, but it does not on that account classes his responsibility, but it does not on that account classes in the say, where the Governor's responsibility in language of our colonial law and cess would have been no "interfarence with the freedom of deliteration." Why, then, should the laying spons the table a paper containing the same information be viswed as 'endangering the independence of Parliament!"

But "Speculum" seems to forgetightat in the case supposed, of the hoatile address being carried, Ministers could not well have avoided resigning, not only on constitutional grounds, but because upon moral grounds they would have been bound to suffer for the acrape into which they had either induced or silswed the Governor to fall. And it was to ward off or escape from the consequences of their own ignorance or want of judgment, one of which was loss of office, that the Governor's personal interposition was invoked and used. It was an instance of extreme cunning overreaching itself and falling into its own snare. The Governor's minute was employed, and thus the Governor himself enlisted to fight the battle of a party,
It was this circumstance of a Ministerial and party interest being involved in the use to which the Governor's minute was put, and for which it was obviously invended, and the effects it was calculated and intended to produce, and not the mere transmission of a Governor's message, or even the language in which it was couched, that constituted the political danger in the late crisis, which seems to be hidden from the eyes of such writers as "Speculum." It was the bringing the Governor's personal influence and authority to bear upon the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly that really involved an invasion of the "rights and privileges of Parliament"—that amounted to "interference with the freedom of deliberation" that went to the extent of "endangering the independence of Parliament." But for this, not the Governor, but the late Ministers were responsible, and were accordingly censured and punished. And the votes of the new Assembly, appealed to upon this very point by the late Ministers themselves, have amply vindicated the old constitutional principle, that "the King can do n

expound to others those constitutional leasons, which in ; ractice they have shown thems: was so unapt to exemplify.

Yours, &c., SPECULATOR. "SPEUTATOR" AND THE GARDINER MINUTE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD,

"Spectator's" arguments of this morning
would be unanswerable, were it not that in order to provide a foundation for them he has begged the operations. Boint was that the act of laying upon the table the Governor's reasons for his exercise in a particular manner of the Royal prerogative of pardon did not, and could not, in any way he also all pointed out have been a particular manner of the Royal prerogative of particular manner." and I pointed out held the state of the Parliament, and I pointed to him alone, and his expressing a bind to him alone, and his expressing a bind to him alone, and his expressing this reasons for exercising a cover which believe to the heart of the downton's action in a master which belonged exclusively to himself, but that it animadverred on the character of the debates in the House. "and that therefore Mr. Forsier made a fair illustration, for the Governor had no more right to tell the Assembly that it ought to conduct its debates with greater propriety—which in effect the minute did—than he would have to control the votes of the electors."

The point, therefore, upon which we join issue is this. I sturd in my former letter:—

"The final decision was given upon the petitions which had to be dealt with, and the reasons explained were in reply to the arguments advanced in those petitions. The ressons were obviously not framed with any reference whetever the opinions expressed by the minority in Parliament.

"Spectator" argues that the minute was intended to reflect on the debates of the House; and in support of this view he urge:

"Spectator argues that the minute had been oblivious of the long and repeated debates in the Assembly on the subject matter of his paper; and he would possess a human nature not hitherto known in politics, had been only in the first of the passage specially complained of heart of the would possess a human nature no language,

The false issues which have been raised in connec and state issues which have been raised in connection with his case, and the undue importance which has been attached to it, will, I venture to think, be generally acknowledged when (to use "Spectatar's" words) "the mists with which this queetion has been obscured by party spirit have been cleared away."

Your obedient servant,

Sydney, March 2.

MEASLES.

TO THE ROTTOR OF THE MERALIO.

From the statistics for last month, we learn that the death-rate was the largest over recorded, being 285 over the average of the previous five years. The chief cause was measles and its attendant diseases.

With proper treatment measles is generally considered a disease unattended with danger, excepting sometimes in the case of adults. Now, both in the fown and country, great ignorance of what the proper treatment should be, prevaile, especially amongst the poorer classes.

May I therefore offer a suggestion to the Government or Civic authorities, with whom the duty rosts of carrying our remedial measures, that some general directions for the proper treatment of the disease further its stages he are inselled.

out remedial measures, that some general directions for the proper freetment of the disease during its stages be printed and posted up in complemens places, or distributed by circulars throughout the city and suburbs, and, as far as possible, in the country.

For public instruction we see almost everywhere posted up—timeral directions for restoring the apparential glave and, and may it not be wise to adopt also an analogous course during the present epidemic of measure?

It is not improbable that to the neglect, through ignorance of the great care and proper treatment necessary to be exercised during the tiliness, may be attributed the cause of many deaths resulting from those attendant diseases, which are sometimes more dangerous than the malady itself.

WANT OF EFFECTIVE MUNICIPAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE MERALL.

Sik,—I am a man of many grievances, and in my necessity an occupabled to apply to you for assistance in redressing them.

1. In spite of a by-law to the centrary, the rain in wet weather comes off the roofs of several houses on to the parament much to my discentive. I need only refer to one instance, vin., at junction of Hunter and George street. Why sm I to be thus annoyed? and why is it not stopped?

one instance, vin., at junction or activities. Why an I to be thus annoyed? and why is it not intoped?

L. I came down Belvoir-street, of Elizabeth-street, the other evening, and nearly full into a chasm in the foot-path, which was totally unprotected, and has been so for years. Why is this allowed to be? If I break my neck in that chasm some night, who will reimburse my widow for my leas?

3. Bow is it that the Bydney Fernale Refuge are allowed to have a row of spiles sicking up in the parament, beyond the alignment of the building, without any protection? If I tumble on these going home some night and get impaled, who will pay my doctor's and undershaders hitle.

De, Mr. Relitor, help me to get these things rectified so that I may never again have to dub myself, Insamuch as in Sydrey, from the peculiar formation of the coast line of the harrour, we have require that we should take time by the forelock and hasfin to do now what we should be compelled to do at some future time. In anything that might be done, remove regard should be had to these who come after us. We should not seek to legislate merely for the present mumment, but also for the ultimate welfare of the city. Hone of us could doubt that as time rolled on and the commerce of Port Jaclson increased we should find the present railway terminus most inconveniently situated in every respect. It increased in many once the control francis to such an extent, that to persons living only 15 or 20 milles from Sydrey the cost of conveying their goods through Sydney would be nearly as great as the railway cost. If the master were taken in hand now, the land that would require to be purchased might be obtained at a small cost compared to what it would cost in 20, 50, or 160 years bence. He did not pretend the point out what scheme should be adopted, or where the

A SLIFFERY Unground.—Some time ago (says the dryws) a gentleman calling himself a captain appeared here from Queenaland. Having peaced through bytacy and obtained £100 by getting a bill backed by an unfortunate captain of one of the American mill steamers, he arrived here and settled down at a well-known hotel in Queen-street, and obtained from the landlord, under the pretence of a large fortune due by the captain's breaker, another £100. After getting a plane, de., without solitement, the captain smarly lived in a subsurb near Malbourne, from which he went to a place intulove to he vicious. Sallors stood by the port boat with strict injunctions not to allow it to be lowered till orders were given to that effect by the captain; but the passengers made a rush, the sallors were overpowered, and the boat was got possession of, many being drowned in the lowering of it, and by jumping after it.

To add to the terror of the scene, the feremast fell with a dreadral crash over the side, and simonst simultaneously the slames burst out of the after hatch. Then the captain, bearing himeel's admirably through this severe trial, though his wife and boy were with him on board, and stood by his side at the wheel, cried out that everybody must do the best they could to save their lives, litt "the best" was very little, and the passengers were by this time so terror-stricken that even they could not avail the melves of the little means at their command for asving life. The chief officer, second officer, and the beatswain tried to turn over the large pinnace bying bottom up on the deck, in order to launch her, but they could not, from the hundreds around, command "sip enough to accomplish their purpose, and they had to give it up, not, however, before the flames had crapt to close upon them that the bowe of the pinnace had caught fire. The ship had its inll complement of six boats, hat four of these were burnt, or that two only, including the overturned starboard boat, were available. Some passengers threw the captain's gig over the side, but it was doubtful if many passengers got into her. All hepe being now lost, the port boat was lowered, and when almost brought down to the water's edge by her freight of more than thirty persons, she was pushed off the ships side. The other officer and a female passenger jumped overboard after her, and were pushed in. This boat had not got clear many seconds before the maximmast fall over the side with a trovendous crash, and it was seen by those in the boat that a very large number were killed by the fall. About this time, Captain Einsile, catching up his

A deputation waited on the Lord Mayor, at the Mansion House, yesterday morning, in reference to the rolle of the sufferers consequent upon the less of the Cospatrick. Mr Temple, one of the owners of the vessel, said they had come to sek his lordship's permission to reserve subscriptions at the Mansion House from the general public in aid of the sufferers by this desedful calamity. Speaking for his firm, and he believed for every other time engaged in emigration business, he would state that they did everything in their power to protect the lives of passengers entrasted to them, and that the Board of Trade exercised every possible vigilance to secure the asfety of thise on board. There suight he some points in which improvements might be made, and, if so, shipswers would be gled, he was sure, to adopt them. One suggestion his firm had at once adopted—analyst, that of placing in each boat (in addition to the each of water required by the Board of Trade) a surply of provisions in case of semegrancy. The Lord Mayor, in reply, said he could only say that he would be most willing to do everything in his power to aid the deputation in the collection of subscriptions for the relief of the sufferers. Whether preventible or not, it was impossible for them to say, but this event had cast a gloon over the whole country, and a feeling of sympatry for the sufferers must be in every heart. The steamship Athlete, Captain Hawkins, from Liverpool to Bristol, was coming up the river Avon, on all to December afternoon, when she collided with the echooner Kestrel, of Faisouth, Captain Willis, in ballast, just starting for Barbadoes. The force of the collision was so great that the Kestrel was cut down to the water's edge, and sank in three minutes. The force of the collision was so great that the Kestrel was cut down to the water's edge, and sank in three minutes. The erew had barely time to ave themselves. The Athlete went on the mud, and there remains not much damaged. This is the second time the Athlete has been aground in the Avon this year.

The Shah's visit to Europe has occasioned many alterations in the external asspearance of the upper and middle classes in Persia. In religious matters the old sankticism is less frequently displayed, and the missionaries enjoy great liberty. The numerous Armenian Christians are conscious of the protection of the Russian ambassedor, and their indiunce is materially increased by many of the foreign residents marrying their daughters.

In the year 1867 there were 53,630 persons in Great Britain taxed for using armorial bearings, seven years afterwards, in 1874, the number had grown to 58,088, an increase of 2486. The number of those who bear their arms upon their carriages, and, consequently, pay the higher duty, increased by 47,144, and in 1874 and become 19,001, or more than a third of the whole number; but the number paying the lower duty for duty for bearings, but not upon a carriage, decreased by 2299, and was thus reduced to 38,227 in 1875. There had been an alteration in the duties; the higher duty, which was 62s. 8d. in 1807, and bean reduced to 32s.

The total number of vessels of different classes is numbered of the contage of 244,467. This, as compared with last year, shows an increase of 17 in 1 a number, and a decrease in the tonnage of 255. The plaintife in this case were Christopher Newton, and John S. Newton, rading under the firm of Christopher Newton, Brothera, and Co.; and the defendant, John Coaquin Cluney, master of the brig Robert Covan.

Mr. Stutier, Q.C., and Mr. Simpson, instructed by Mesers. Pigott and Trickett, appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. Salomona, instructed by Mesers. Stephen and Stephen, for the defendant.

The action was brought for damage to certain pulu shiped on board the defendant's vessel at Honolula for Sydney. The first count of the declaration was for not delivering according to the terms of the boll of lading, the second for wait of proper care in stowage of the second. The defendant denied the agreement alleged, denied having received the goods on the terms alleged, denied the alleged brackhes of the agreement, and said that the damage had arisen from the accepted causes and perils. The first and last defences were, however, practically abundaned, and the substantial ground of defence insisted on was that the damage to the pulu arose from its state when shipped at Honolulu, and was not caused in any way by the sot of the carriers. The question arose whether such a defence was available under the particular pleas in this action, Mr. Salomons contending that the third plea denying any breach of the agreement in the bill of lading, met this case: while it was argued upon the other side that a special plea was necessary. His Honor decided that the defence could be gone into upon the records at its tood. The circumstances of the case were as follows. In December, 1874, 123 bales of pulu were shipped at Honolulu to Sydney, to the order of Messra. C. Newton and Co. the plaintiffs. In the bill of lading, the only parils excepted were "the dangers of the ease," and the unanticause "not accountable for leakage, breakage, &c.." was not inserted. The result of the action would seem to show that it is unnecessary. The weight of the pulu was stated in the margin to be 1424 lbs., but the woods. "weight and contents unknown," appea
